Submarines Seen Off Newfoundland Canadian Report At Toronto Says

Battle of the Atlantic Growing More Intense, Rear Admiral Nelles Declares at Oakville

TORONTO, Nov. 5 (AP) — German submarines, already reported seen from the Newfoundland coast, will be operating close to Nova Scotia within a short time, the chief of the Canadian naval staff predicted tonight after the christening of a corvette designed to fight U-boats. If U-boats reach Nova Scotian waters, they would be adjacent to areas of the United States. The western coast of Nova Scotia is about fifty miles from the easternmost point of the United States and almost the same distance from Campobello Island, New Brunswick. Since President Roosevelt has a summer home, Cape Sable, southern tip of Nova Scotia, is about 250 miles east of Portland, Me.

Battle More Intense

The battle (of the Atlantic) is growing ever more intense until today we have German submarines operating adjacent to the straits of Belle Isle and in the vicinity of Newfoundland," Rear Admiral Perry Nelles, chief of Canada's naval staff, said at a dinner at Oakville, Ont. "It is only a matter of a short time before they will be close to the Nova Scotian coast."

Earlier, when the Corvette Oakville was christened at Oakville, Navy Minister Angus MacDonald revealed the reported presence of submarines off Newfoundland and said two had been attacked. He said one was possibly sunk last night by a Canadian Corvette and a coastal command plane in the Belle Isle channel.

This channel, at the mouth of the strait between Newfoundland and Labrador opposite the northern tip of Newfoundland, is about 400 miles by air north of the U.S. defense base on Newfoundland.

"There are others along the northern convoy route," said MacDonald at the dedication of a new concrete, the Oakville.

U-boats also lie off Dakar,

Blind Man Will Be Akron Mayor

George J. Harter, Former Editor, Ousts Republican Candidate

AKRON, Ohio, Nov. 5 (AP) — A blind man is going to be mayor of Akron. George J. Harter, 58-year-old Democratic state legislator who entered politics after becoming blind ten years ago, has ousted D. Schroyer, three-term Republican, thereby upsetting most experts' predictions.

Editors in this heavily-unionized labor capital," gave him 34,185 votes to Schroyer's 28,702 in Tuesday's election.

The mayor-elect, a former newspaper managing editor, blames his blindness on "long hours of copy reading." His wife has been his eyes" since he lost his sight, reading legislative bills and the newspapers, and guiding him wherever he goes. When he takes the oath of office Jan. 1 this constant companionship will end. A secretary will read for him and guide him around the city hall.

Nazi Spearhead Driving through High Mountains, Berlin Declares

Big Peninsula May Be Converted into a Base for Attacks on the Caucasus; No Other Gains

BERLIN, Nov. 5 (AP) — A German spearhead driving through the Yalta mountains which serve the Russians as a natural fortress was reported tonight to have reached the Black Sea to split the Soviet defenders of Crimea into three segments.

This maneuver announced by the high command would enable the Germans to spread fanwise along the coast in an attempt to take the Yalta positions from the rear.

In its attempt to convert the big peninsula into a base for attack on the Caucasus to the east another German unit was reported pounding beyond the burned-out city of Feodosiya, only fifty-five miles short of Kerch, a bridgehead to the Caucasus.

No Specific Gains

But there were no specific gains mentioned there either by the high command or the press.

In southwestern Crimea, a third German army apparently was fighting beyond Smilferopol in the drive on Sevastopol, big Soviet naval base forty miles away. But news of this front also was scanty.

German airmen were said to be raining explosives on that city to cut off any Soviet attempt to escape by sea and also to make that port useless for the Red fleet.

Regarding the Moscow front, the high command and press were silent except to tell of German air attacks on the Soviet capital, and on the industrial city of Gorki, 250 miles to the east.

Many Shipments Of Small Arms Below Standard

War Department Rejects Large Number of New Machine Guns

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (AP) — War Department officials said today that many shipments of small arms had been rejected by the army on the ground that the workmanship was not up to the required standard.

The reason for the shortcomings, it was explained, was that employees of many firms not hitherto engaged in ordnance work lacked experience in handling precision machinery required in arms manufacture.

One shipment rejected consisted

Wheeler Shows Toys Made in Britain and Sold in United States

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (AP) — Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) showed the Senate today a half dozen toy soldiers, cannon and searchlights he said were manufactured in Great Britain out of lead, copper and brass and shipped to the United States for sale.

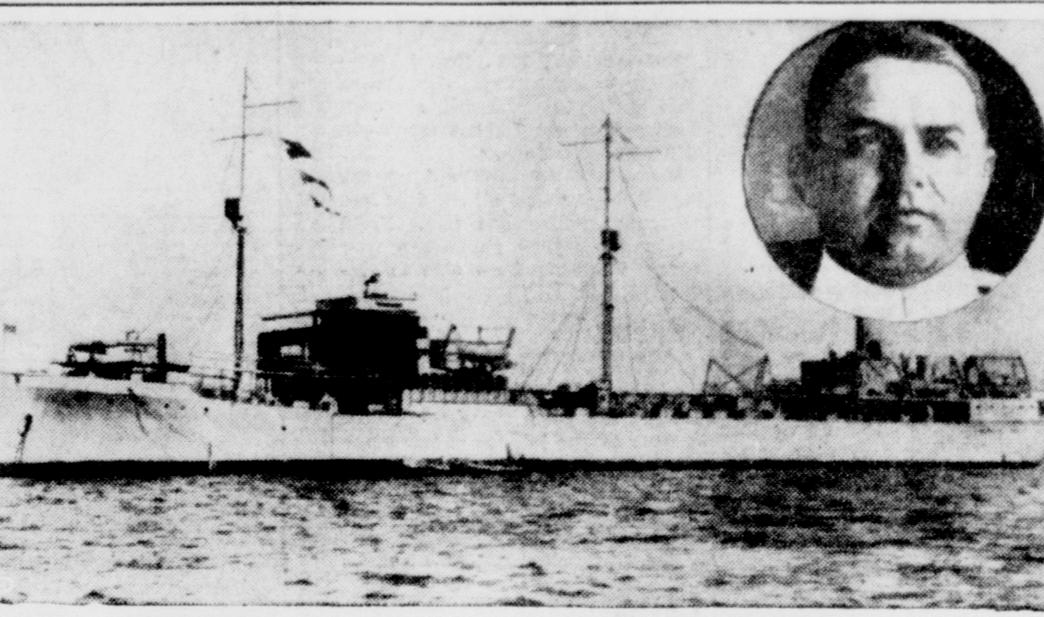

Asserting that American manufacturers were being denied these materials because they were needed for defense production, he asked his listeners why it was necessary for American cargo vessels to ply the waters of the war zones if Britain had shipping space for toys.

Picking up one of the lead soldiers, which he described as a "British Redcoat," Wheeler addressed the toy:

"Why aren't you being made into bullets for guns and cannon to kill these terrible Nazis instead of coming over here to throw our American workmen out of work, because their plants can't get lead?"

There were no deaths or serious injuries among the crew of 107 officers and men. Captain of the tanker was Commander Harley F. Cope of New Orleans.

Aircraft Welders Strike in West; Work Continues

Effectiveness of Walkout Is Challenged by Big Plane Company

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5 (AP) — A strike of aircraft welders in three southern California factories failed to halt production today as union leaders and management representatives disagreed on effectiveness of the walkout, called to force a bargaining agency election.

Meanwhile, 8,500 shipyards welders of the Long Beach-Los Angeles harbor were to meet tonight (11 p.m., E. S. T.) to ratify or reject a proposed agreement of their national president, Karl V. Morris, and chief Sidney Hillman, under which they would return to work pending arbitration of their demand for union autonomy.

Husbands Defeat Four Housewives Seeking Offices

Men Are Victors at Yatesville, Pa., and Ladies Go Home

YATESVILLE, Pa., Nov. 5 (AP)—Four Yatesville housewives were defeated by their spouses in an election bid for jobs as town officers, but all chorused tonight:

"We still love our husbands."

Back in the kitchen, Mrs. Louis Alessandro, unsuccessful council candidate and spokesman for the vanquished, vowed "there is no ill feeling."

In fact, the women might evenly again in 1943, she said, adding: "If all the women in Yatesville had voted for us we would have been elected by at least fifteen ballots."

Men Celebrate Alone

"When the vote was announced we shook hands with our husbands and congratulated them. The men then left to celebrate the victory and we went home."

Nominated as Republicans, the housewives sought two council seats and the jobs of burgess and school director in yesterday's voting in this eastern Pennsylvania coal mining village of 800.

It was no accident that they were lined up against their husbands. The whole thing was a well-laid plan by the men, who thought younger blood was needed in the borough government.

Led by Dominick Mirobelle, 27-year-old WPA supervisor who won the $100-a-year job of burgess, the men induced their wives to run on the opposite ticket, hoping they wouldn't take politics too seriously.

Defeated with Mrs. Alessandro and Mrs. Mirobelle by an average of 130 votes were Mrs. John Bell who also sought a council seat, and Mrs. Pasquale Aciero, who wanted to be school director.

mailed the strength of the German thrusts and because of this and the necessity of reorganizing after the German break-through down the Perekop isthmus from the lower Ukraine, he had for several days been fighting only rear-guard actions while he fell back toward more defensible positions.

This phase of retreat had now ended, or was about to end, upon both the Sevastopol and Kerch approaches and while strong defenses were being thrown up the outer Red forces were now cautiously opening a more general resistance likely to turn shortly into pitched battles far more furious than anything that had yet developed.

Competent informants here declared that Timoshenko now had a well-knit fighting force which from here on out would contest strongly for every mile of the Crimea.

This strategic turn in the far south was accompanied by a sharpening of German offensive action in the Moscow theater.

The Moscow radio during the day put the heaviest fighting on the Central front in the region of Volokolamsk, sixty-five miles northwest of the capital, where the Russians reported that initial German superiority in tank strength had been sharply reduced.

Previously, the area of the most violent action had been about Tula, 100 miles south of Moscow, and it thus appeared that the Germans were following a tactic of applying their greatest pressure alternately above and below the capital.

All signs suggested, however, that the great showdown was coming not upon the snowy battlefields about Moscow but in the far south.

Drive On

"severely mauled" a number of German divisions.

The Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth German regiments were declared to have suffered severely in the Volokolamsk area.

Twenty-seven German airplanes were shot down near Moscow itself during the day.

The Russians were silent about the Crimea fighting, but said German attempts to complete encircle Leningrad in the northwest had failed and that Red troops were counter-attacking on all approaches to that besieged city.

Many Shipments

of 5,000 .50 calibre machine guns, the officials said.

The first order of these guns made by one company was sent back to be reworked. Of the 5,000 guns, eighty per cent were for aircraft armament, the remainder for anti-tank tripod mounts.

The difficulties, officials said, could be corrected only by experience. Until the vast extension of the defense program a year ago, the war department followed a practice, limited by lack of funds, of permitting the training of workers for the careful work essential to the production of ordnance material.

The sudden expansion into full scale production in the fall of 1940, however, led to placing mass orders with companies which could convert their plants for defense manufacture without the preliminary educational orders.

French 'Chutists Caught in France

VICHY, UNOCCUPIED FRANCE, Nov. 5 (AP)—The discovery and capture of an unstated number of Free French parachutists in western unoccupied France and the capture of a grounded British plane loaded with De Gaulle propaganda in the same vicinity were disclosed today.

The dispatch gave no indication as to when the parachutists were rounded up.

The plane, carrying instructions for DeGaulle agents, was captured near Perigueux two days ago when it was forced down by bad weather. The entire British crew was reported dead.

Defense Mediation Board Presents Labor Side of Coal Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (AP)—Labor members of the Defense Mediation Board completed presentation of their views on the captive coal mine dispute today, and industry members took over this afternoon, shortly before the board recessed until tomorrow.

Chairman William H. Davis told the press conference the discussion was "interesting and instructive" but declined to give details of the board's first executive session on the knotty problem. It was indicated that board members were carefully considering relationship of the dispute to labor conditions in the steel and shipbuilding industries.

Davis reiterated there was no understanding that an agreement would be reached this week on the union shop demands of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers. Lewis has set November 15 as the deadline for a second strike in the mines, owned by the nation's largest steel companies, unless his demands are met.

At Leningrad a Russian attempt to cross the Neva river southeast of that besieged city was repulsed with heavy Soviet losses, the high command said.

"Half of the 100 boats used were sunk and the rest were compelled to turn back," it added.

Caucasian oil reservoirs and other resources were pictured as within grasp of the Germans once the Crimea is conquered.

The commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland said that German troops entering the eastern Crimean city of Feodosiya enroute to Kerch found it abandoned by civilians and converted into a fortress that failed.

Previously, the area of the most violent action had been about Tula, 100 miles south of Moscow, and it thus appeared that the Germans were following a tactic of applying their greatest pressure alternately above and below the capital.

All signs suggested, however, that the great showdown was coming not upon the snowy battlefields about Moscow but in the far south.

Congress To Stay

Ever since the start of the current European war in 1939, Republicans in Congress have opposed extended recesses on the ground that the people wanted their representatives here to guard against the nation being led into war.

The special envoy from Japan is the man who a year ago signed the tri-partite Axis pact on behalf of his country. He is coming to explain the Japanese situation to United States leaders.

Secretary of State Hull made clear at his press conference that it was not at the invitation of the United States that a special emissary was en route here.

Hull said the state department was notified by the Japanese government that Kurusu was coming to cooperate with Ambassador Kenji Nomura in further exploratory conversations.

He added that this government had nothing to do with Kurusu's mission in any way, except to extend such courtesies as might be feasible in connection with his travels. From Tokyo it was reported that a Clipper plane had been held at Hongkong at the state department's request to enable Kurusu to catch it.

Agreement Hinted

In some quarters, there was a disposition to assume that Tokyo would not have sent a special emissary—and especially not in such haste—unless conversations here had reached a stage where some concrete agreement was in sight.

In others, it was noted that Kurusu's dramatic trans-Pacific flight had something in it reminiscent of the late Prime Minister Chamberlain's air journeys to Germany just before the war.

It was considered significant that the emissary chosen to come here was a man of previous service in a United States territory, with fluent command of English. Kurusu some years ago served as Japanese vice-consul in Chicago, as consul in New York, and as consul in Honolulu. He married an American woman, the former Miss Alice Little.

Girl Telegraph Operator Slain

SAGINAW, Mich., Nov. 5 (AP)—A blood-stained birch club provided sheriffs deputies tonight with the only clue in the slaying of Wanda May Wheatley, 20-year-old telephone operator whose bruised and battered body was found in a woods near here.

Coroner William E. Honey said an autopsy disclosed the girl, who came to Saginaw three weeks ago from a nearby village to work, had been raped and her skull fractured from a sharp blow.

A hunter stumbled on the body in a thicket five miles south of here this morning. The girl had been missing since 11 p.m. Monday.

Sheriff Hugo A. Muehlenbeck said the birch club and a piece of a woman's garter had been found on a dirt road near where the body was discovered, indicating the girl had been slugged there and dragged into the woods, perhaps while still alive. Bloodstains also were spattered on the road.

The girl had lived with a sister in Saginaw. Police were not notified of her disappearance until late yesterday.

Condition of Holly Taken To Indicate Long, Hard Winter

PRINCESS ANNE, Md., Nov. 5 (AP)—Somerset county farmers look for a long, hard winter.

They base their prediction on the condition of the native holly trees, heavily laden with bright red berries—pretty to look at but ominously presaging tough weather ahead.

The State Department of Forests and Parks already is soliciting the market for Christmas holly decorations, opening its six-year-old clearing house in Baltimore for the sale of cut and packed spray. A better crop than Somerset has experienced in years was in prospect.

State foresters announced these consumer prices for properly cut holly and fresh foliage:

Bioff is on trial with George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees (AFL), on charges of extorting $550,000 from the movie industry as the price of peace.

Bioff denied the accusation from the stand. Browne did not testify.

Case to Jury Today

The case was expected to go to the jury tomorrow after Attorney Martin Conboy summed up in the half of the courtroom.

Arguing that Bioff's alleged victims were willing victims who turned over large sums of money to him with little or no protest, Breslin said that the evidence pointed not to extortion but to a deal arranged by Nicholas Schenck, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Warner Brothers, Inc., at the request of Nicholas Schenck who, he said, told him "the industry is being sandbagged through legislation."

Breslin said that only two witnesses testified to threats by Bioff.

They were, he said, Charles Moskowitz, Loew's New York manager and brother of Joseph Moskowitz who was convicted along with Joseph Schenck of income tax evasion; and Nicholas Schenck, brother of Joseph Loew's, and others.

Bioff testified that he collected more than $1,000,000 from executives of Loew's Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Warner Brothers, Inc., at the request of Nicholas Schenck who, he said, told him "the industry is being sandbagged through legislation."

He added, he said, Charles Moskowitz, Loew's New York manager and brother of Joseph Moskowitz who was convicted along with Joseph Schenck of income tax evasion; and Nicholas Schenck, brother of Joseph Loew's, and others.

Breslin contended that Bioff was a comparatively poor man since Joseph Schenck was known to have loaned him large sums of money.

MacDonald's statement followed his assertion before the House of Commons last night that "more than one" U-boat had been sunk by Canadian ships and disclosure that Canada is building operational airfields in Newfoundland and Labrador on the Atlantic and British Columbia on the Pacific.

Rear Admiral Percy Nelles, naval chief of staff, stood by and approved Macdonald's statement.

In Halifax, Nova Scotia, focal point of Canadian naval activities, the news occasioned no surprise. It was recalled that a group of survivors reaching Halifax several weeks ago were understood to have been from a ship torpedoed near Newfoundland.

Loophole Price Control Is Inexplicable

IN THE FACE of vigorous and yet sincere protest arising all over the country without regard to partisan considerations, it seems strange, indeed, that the Congress apparently continues hell-bent on adopting a price control bill containing two big loopholes that would frustrate its purpose.

It seems all the stranger because our own war experience has provided a sufficient lesson, because the economists are unanimous in opposition and because many of those whom it is supposed to benefit are apprehensive over the possible outcome of a piecemeal measure.

Nobody wants to see the farmer denied his rightful share of the consumer dollar. Nobody wants to see labor denied equitable wages sufficient to cope with the cost of living. But it seems as obvious as a heavy army tank coming down Main street that unless price controls are all-inclusive disastrous inflation will inevitably set in and hit every last one of us, including the farmers and the wage earners.

Agriculture is one of the basic industries of the nation. It is one of the fundamental elements in any attempt to control price. If farm prices rise, the cost of food rises for workers in the industrial centers. If the cost of food rises for workers, demands for wage increases to meet those rising costs are inevitable and excuse.

Consequently, if the wage rates in industrial centers rise, the cost of industrial production will rise. And if the cost of industrial production rises, it not only hits back at the products of industry the farmer must buy, but it will simply blow the ceiling off all price control. If that happens, the whole country goes into a vicious circle of price rising which will result in disastrous inflation.

The exclusion of food source prices and wages from operation of any price control measure will certainly head the country for serious trouble. If prices are to be controlled effectively, if the cost of living is to be maintained at a fairly stable basis, then all the factors entering into costs must be controlled.

It is, as stated, passing strange why Congress even seriously considers this loophole legislation, why the measure reported by the House Banking and Currency committee should exclude the two most important fundamentals from its operation. It is all the stranger because it proffers no satisfactory explanation for that stand. It leaves the suspicion that the legislators are selfishly and obsequiously playing for bloc votes regardless of the national welfare and it is pretty hard to swallow that in view of the national emergency even though we have had a lot of that sort of thing rammed down our throats during the last several years.

A Gratifying Fireworks Casualty Achievement

COINCIDENTALLY with the gratifying outcome of the referendum petition seeking to delay operation of the anti-fireworks bill and defeat it, came a reminder of the splendid results of similar restrictive regulation brought about by other legal means through the efforts of John B. Gontrum, the state insurance commissioner.

That reminder has been furnished by the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Blindness in a report that there were only seventeen accidents throughout the state resulting from the last Independence day celebration. Twenty of the twenty-three counties were free of such accidents. This contrasts with a total of 307 casualties during the 1940 celebration and the deplorable totals of preceding years. The reminder again stresses the fact that there never was really any valid excuse for opposition to restrictive legislation aside from selfish economic considerations.

The petition, which was held last week by Judge J. Abner Saylor in Baltimore to be invalid, put the law immediately into operation and obviated the necessity of submitting it to the voters of the state. The action will give further aid to Mr. Gontrum in his praiseworthy efforts to enforce restrictive regulations. It was he who came to the rescue of the public safety interest by exercising his powers as state fire marshal to prohibit as far as possible the indiscriminate sale and use of these explosives. The fireworks interests did their best to stop him, but the courts upheld his authority and he went ahead with the happy result of achieving the best fireworks casualty record in the history of the state, even though his regulations were not as stringent as the law.

The campaign to achieve fireworks restriction covered a rather lengthy and somewhat checkered chapter, and invoked pretty hard work on the part of many, including the society mentioned, numerous other organizations and the press, with Governor O'Connor doing an admirable share, but their earnest and persistent cooperation finally achieved the victory long since deserved. Incidentally, the fact that some of those who were accused of perjury in connection with petition signatures are to go to trial in criminal court should serve to impress people generally with the risks that sometimes run in the petition business.

A Reassuring Note On Tank Production

FROM DETROIT comes the information that the Ford Motor Company has received from the War department a letter of intent for the production of M-4 medium tanks.

A. M. Wibel, Ford vice president, said the letter was the first step in a program contemplating ultimate construction of 400 tanks a month in addition to the manufacture and assemblies for other tank producers. Wibel stated that $39,000,000 worth of new plant facilities would be needed, that steel castings at the River Rouge plant already have been enlarged and that one of the rolling mills would be enlarged and converted to rolling tank armor. Production of the tanks is expected to begin in about twelve months. They will be assembled at the suburban Highland Park plant.

This output will make the Ford company the nation's largest tank builder. Chrysler Corporation is already producing these medium tanks, while General Motors Corporation is expected to enter the field soon. Some observers predict that the three plants, at capacity, will be able to assemble 100 tanks a day.

It is good thus to hear that we are at last getting along with this production in view of the lack of it at the army maneuvers and the loud complaints we have heard about it. Much of it could perhaps have come sooner, much of it could have been expedited by man-days of work unnecessarily lost.

Senator Hatch Offers Another Bill

AMERICAN CITIZENS should look askance at any legislation designed to restrict, save in cases of crime, the actions of an individual. Such restraints should not ordinarily be imposed.

Who are they here now? There is too much possibility of unfairness in naming either misfits or promising performers. But the mere question is enough. Who are they now?

The question defies an answer and every reader can supply his own.

Leadership Failure Is Seen As Due To Big Boss Plan

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Senator Byrd's dictum that, judged by any standard, our defense effort is a failure, may cover a little too much territory. There are some bright spots, though, even as to these, post-war post mortems are sure to show some terrible extravagances. But, generally speaking, the senator is striking pretty close to the bull's eye, as every impartial non-political observer will be pretty likely to concede.

Of course there are a good many causes for this. The one that appeals most to me is rather difficult for personal reasons to write about. Yet on a little reflection it should be too obvious to be obscured by any personal considerations.

Where are the unquestionably great men and leaders, either in the legislative or the executive departments, whose demonstrated success and leadership have put them into positions of unquestioned authority? That there are some of that quality I do not question, but that there are any who, because of that quality, have been given their heads, remains yet to be shown.

Need Has Ripened

It is getting far along enough in this emergency for this kind of man to begin to appear. At this stage in England, they had certainly emerged in this and in World War One. Grant, Lee, Jackson and Sherman had their heads well above the ruck at this stage in our Civil War. In Germany dead wood seems to have been sifted out and true leadership developed right at the outset. It took us over a year in World War One, but at this stage the men who finally did the great jobs were already ordinary to be imposed.

Who are they here now? There is too much possibility of unfairness in naming either misfits or promising performers. But the mere question is enough. Who are they now?

The question defies an answer and every reader can supply his own.

None Gets a Chance

The fact is that we have not developed more than a few of even demonstrated fitness and none of those has been given a chance to do his stuff. It is a system of checks and balances, divided authority and one man set against another until nothing is done whole-heartedly into his job. If anyone does get two ramifications he gets his.

Generally speaking, it is a gallery of echo-men. The labor, farm and fiscal policies are such as to make full speed ahead difficult if not impossible, and the constant changes to new and ever more indefinite goals show a great lack of planning and definition of purpose. This is hardly the fault of subordinates but in such a situation, any development of the kind of subordinate leadership we are discussing here is next to impossible.

In Congress, Too

Much the same thing is true in the Congress that is so apparent in the executive departments. Really great men, in both houses, are so intent on listening for "his master's voice" that the great domestic legislative policies, without which even an effective execution of foreign policy is impossible, are neglected.

There used to be a stereotyped subject for a high school oration, "The eternal stars shine out when is dark enough." It certainly is getting pretty dark but the eternal stars seem to have missed the train—or maybe it is just that they can't make their presence seen in the light of the president's vast lunar effluvia.

"I know it's my own fault. I'm not trying to blame anybody. It happened just as you said it would. You said: 'If you keep on in the way you're going, you'll get into trouble.'

"I heard you. I didn't take your advice. I had to follow my own judgment. I figured my opinion was as good as yours any day in the week and I had to get my experience in my own way. Maybe I was wrong, maybe you were right all the time—but maybe you just had a bit of luck. I might have been right and you might have been wrong. You can't prove any different, can you?"

"But here I am in the trouble you foretold and that's your answer. The Steering Knuckle broke. I broke, too. My eggs were all in one basket. I counted my chickens before they were hatched. I thought I knew everything. Well, I'm not whimpering am I? I'm not yelling for help. I'm just sitting here in my own mud, looking around and wondering what to do next. It's my own fault and I don't agree with people who think trouble you've brought on yourself is the hardest to bear. When you step out and take a chance and lose, with your eyes wide open, when it's your fault — why SHOULD you complain?"

"You've got something then that may be useful later on. You have had experience ground into your hide and as you pick out the slivers you do a bit of useful thinking."

"That's your profit when it's your fault. That's your salvage, anyway. When it's your own fault you can get at least 10 cents on the dollar out of the wreck and you can apply that dime to starting all over again—toward making another fool of yourself, perhaps, but under your own power."

"So you're not hurting MY feelings, fellow, when you tell me my troubles are my own fault. That's the only consolation I have—and I hope you have as much when you crack up!"

his good fortune and is ready and willing to do his part toward preserving it, whereas the rest of us are inclined to take our blessings for granted and assume that they will be safe forever without any need for sacrifice.

If this Armenian watchmaker has cause to be grateful for the United States, the land of freedom, the United States has, in even greater measure, cause to be grateful for him.

Too Late Now To Argue

From the Morgantown, W. Va., Post

As far as we can see, the time has passed when there is any point in arguing whether the United States should get into the war.

We are into the war right now with everything but a formal declaration of war, and we may not bother with that declaration regardless of how much more deeply we become involved.

It has come about just as almost everybody predicted. We kept edging a little closer to the war while assuring ourselves that everything we did was going to be "short of war." But under modern conditions war isn't a precipice that you suddenly plunge over. It is rather a broad river into which you can advance a long ways before getting over your head so that you have to swim or drown.

We have been going out into that river of war for weeks. Now we are in it up to our necks, and after one or two more steps we are going to have to start swimming.

You say we have the additional alternative of turning back? To be sure, but the chance of our turning back is so remote that astronomical odds would have to be calculated to put it on a wagering basis.

Maybe after it's all over, we can look back on this experience as we looked back on our entry into World War No. 1, and after seeing the whole matter with the benefit of hindsight, perhaps we can see mistakes which we will assure ourselves are never to be repeated.

Maybe and perhaps, but after seeing how we have got into this war in the past twelve months, we have little justification for claiming any ability to learn from the grim lessons of experience.

TRY YOUR RUSE EARLY
IF YOU are going to try to "put a fast one over" on your opponent in the play, making him think your holding is different from what it is, and so luring him into a disastrous play, your best chance is to do it early. Peculiarly, the same defensive ruse was tried at both of them, succeeding at both, but failing at the other, though the declarers at the two tables were of about equal ability. The difference was that one tried the stunt early, and the other late.

The Better Way to Treat Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Another way is to avoid causing it by preventing its cause. So why not analyze yourself those dull headaches, fits, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common sense "ounce of prevention"? Another like that of millions is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. The "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal is just the "bulk" you need. You can regularize your diet and still eat only "regular" but keep regular day after day and month after month. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

County Homemakers Club Re-elects Mrs. Maddocks

Reports on Achievements of Past Year Made; Two Speakers Are Heard

Mrs. W. L. Maddocks was re-elected president of the Allegany County Council of Homemakers Clubs yesterday morning at the business meeting and Achievement day program held in the recreation hall of the Centre Street Methodist church. Mrs. Claude T. Jett was elected treasurer. Only two officers are elected each year and the vice-president and secretary will be elected next year.

Reports on the year's achievements were made by Mrs. W. O. Wolford; Mrs. Jett gave the financial report. Other reports were made by Mrs. Arthur Phillips on the fair; Mrs. John S. Cook, publicity; Mrs. Thomas Boyle, clothing; Mrs. Edward Lewis, officers report; Mrs. George Fey, home-garden; Mrs. A. Smith, music; Mrs. Herbert C. Heineman, home reading; Mrs. George Kraft, peace; and Mrs. Robert Young, Rural Women's Short Course.

Miss Wilma Ryan, president of the Allegany County Council of 4-H clubs brought greetings from the clubs. Mrs. Cook gave the invocation and the entire group sang "America" and "Auld Lang Syne." Unity of Effort Needed

Mrs. Joseph Wheeler, Mrs. Charles Long, and Mrs. Robert Young sang "The Lord's Prayer" preceding the luncheon. Mrs. George Fey was in charge of the decorations which included bowls of fruit and garlands of ivy. Mrs. Maddocks introduced the various officers and county leaders. Talks were made by Mrs. Randall Spoorlein, past president of the Maryland State Council of Homemakers and Miss Helen Shelby, extension service.

Mrs. Spoorlein gave the highlights of the national meeting held in Nashville, Tenn., last month. Speaking on the group discussions of the opportunities and responsibilities of the rural women Mrs. Spoorlein stressed the need of "unity of effort"; of more religious training in the home and schools to eliminate the spiritual ills of the country; and an "education program for recreation".

The speaker said in discussing the world crisis today the question was asked "Are the women ready to go around the peace table" and found that they were not until they have an understanding of the world in which they live; that everyone is depending on everyone else; and are better informed on the cause of friction between countries and are

Miss Shelby spoke of the clothing project and that more requests are made for it than any other project. She warned those present that they would have to make adjustments in the family budget and their attitude toward clothing and be ready to accept substitutes for materials, particularly wool and silk. She reminded them to ask for and to expect to get labels and to make use of them for better buying. This care of clothing and more home sewing are the major factors in adjusting themselves to clothing and the family budget, she added.

A style show of the outstanding achievements in the home-sewing project was presented under the direction of Mrs. Thomas Boyle, and included housecoats, slack suits, morning dresses, afternoon and street clothes, suits, redingote, coats and evening gowns. Mrs. Boyle closed her remarks with "Man's work is from sun to sun. Women's work is a lot of fun." A group of work clothes was shown and the designs explained by Miss Shelby.

The Allegany County Homemakers Chorus presented a program which included "Blossom Time", J. W. Lerman; "The Heavens Are Declaring", Beethoven; and "O, That We Two Were Maying", Smith.

Earache Is Always a Warning Signal, Which Must Never Be Neglected

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"It seems sometimes as if we tried to outdo ourselves in finding some way to injure our hearing," says a prominent ear specialist. In infancy we use the canal as a hiding place for buttons and beans. Later in life we fill the canal with strange fluids. Or pull at the lobe of the ear to show that we are thinking; genius is at work.

We trumpet into a handkerchief when we have colds, blowing infectious material into the middle ear. In the presence of an infectious disease we say: "It's just a little earache" and let it go till the drum ruptures or worse happens.

Pulling and rubbing the external ear may be a sign of genius, but it is more likely to be a sign of pain.

wax in the ears—a slumbering infection of the skin of the external ear canal which should be treated by the specialist. Pulling may drive it in to invade the drum. Boxing children's ears is a barbaric form of discipline which may rupture an ear drum.

On the subject of the external ear, let us destroy a popular prejudice about frostbite which will soon be among us. Instead of applying snow or cold water or warm water to restore circulation, the best method—first aid books to the contrary—is to apply the warm hand. Dr. Stefansson found this the approved method among the Eskimos.

Yours truly,

Etzel Indicted By Federal Jury

Baltimorean Accused of Damaging Martin B-26 Bombers

BALTIMORE, Nov. 5 (AP)—A federal grand jury here has indicted Michael William Etzel, 22, accused of damaging Martin B-26 bombers being manufactured for the War Department.

The jury presented twenty-four separate counts against the young paint-shop foreman, arrested at work at the Martin plant a week ago by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents.

Etzel was accused in eighteen counts of slashing electric wires in center sections of eighteen bombing planes; in four counts of snipping wires in nose section of four bombers; and in two counts of cutting tubing in two planes.

United States District Attorney Bernard J. Flynn said each of the twenty-four counts carried a possible maximum penalty of ten years imprisonment—a total of 240 years.

Etzel is being held in $25,000 bail after being arraigned before United States Commissioner James K. Chillem. The commissioner entered a plea of innocent for the native Baltimorean when Etzel refused to plead.

Dead Pan Rabbits Crash Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Director Mitchell Leisen says rabbits, not dogs, are the best animal actors. "Rabbits stay put in a scene," he says. "That makes them easy to light and handle. They don't risk like dogs or get scared and run like cats. Of course, they do have expressionless, dead paws. With their small mouths, they can't react like dogs. But then a dog can't wrinkle his nose."

Vichy Protests Capture of Five Ships by British

Declares Vessels Were Not Carrying War Materials when Intercepted

VICHY. Unoccupied France, Nov. 4 (AP) — The French government has protested to London against the capture of a convoy of five French merchantmen in the Indian ocean Sunday, calling it "an aggression of ten against one, the uselessness of which in the Anglo-German conflict is manifest."

A French ministry of marine communiqué said four British cruisers and six patrol boats participated in the action against a single gunboat escorting the French convoy, which was intercepted 200 miles south of Durban after leaving Madagascar.

It listed the captured ships as the compeigne, a 9,986-ton passenger liner; the Cap Padaran and Cap Tourane, passenger vessels of 8,000 tons each; the Bangkok and the Commandant Dorize, freighters of 8,056 and 5,529 tons.

According to the Vichy version, the captured ships were repatriating Colonial troops and carrying large supplies of sugar, coffee, rice,

It wasn't until after the cablegram from the British war office and Eric had become a hero, his story front page news in American newspapers, that she knew what those references to Win had meant. Eric was killed in action. Where, she did not know.

But it was that which tormented her during those weeks after the message had come, the shocking cablegram.

It was shock and deep, growing sadness she felt. It was not grief, it was not agony, but it was very real sorrow. And when she had examined herself and the past which led to Eric's going off to fight England, she came upon the truth.

Eric had really come to love her as she once had loved him, but Eric knew what she realized for the first time: Eric knew that she loved Win, and would, forever.

From her new perspective she saw again that domestic scene on Christmas Eve. Eric had seen then that she didn't know at the time. He knew that if Win loved her, he would keep forever silent while Eric was there.

Had Eric's going then been a gesture of sacrifice? Had it been . . . she would not face the word "suicide" in fact.

But she couldn't stand it alone. She went to East Lynbrook and she said to Win, "We must talk about Eric, Win."

"Why are you so tortured?" Win asked, reading the expression in her eyes.

"There are things I must know about Eric. I thought I knew him well, living with him all those years."

"You were good for him and to him, Halle. He wrote me before he left. He told me things about you."

Halle felt the blood warm her cheeks, but she knew that Eric could not have been crude. He would not have written about her to Win as he had written about Win to her.

She said, "I failed him. If I hadn't left him, if I'd stopped him from reading in the beginning . . ."

"You couldn't stop Eric from doing what he wanted to do. No one in all his life has ever been able to do it."

It was hard to tell him what she'd come to say, hard to say enough and not too much.

She said, "Win, there was never anything morbid about Eric?"

"Never."

"He wouldn't . . . wouldn't have joined up because he knew . . ."

Win's strong brown hands took her own and pressed them hard, but his voice was very gentle:

"Because he knew the odds were against his coming back? Maybe, Halle."

Her face went very white and very still. Again Win's hands held her own, stilling the trembling.

"But we are not to guess his reasons. Do I know what you are thinking?"

Halle nodded. "I think so, Win." He shook his head. "Then you are wrong. It was not because he had lost you. Not for any reason connected with his loss. What Eric wanted, he got. He wouldn't have gone away from you because you sent him. He went for adventure's sake."

"If I could only believe it!"

"You must believe it, Halle. Eric was a changeling child. It was his destiny to be different from the mold of his fathers. The simple things we know as real to us, that make up our characters and our earthly wants, the simple following of familiar patterns, our valuations of love and loyalty and work, Eric did not have. The things that mean the most to most of us, meant little to him."

"Yes," she said, her eyes clinging to his face.

"But Eric had other things which we might call selfish, but they were so much a part of him, they were like his heart or his head. They couldn't be changed. He had to follow where they led. We don't know what balancing fine things he had as well. Those are not the things a chap talks about. He must have been capable of great sacrifice. He proved it. He flew for a cause and he died, of this I am sure, the way he would want to die."

Halle felt a pressure lift from her heart. "You are sure?"

"I am sure. This thing, which was the biggest he'd ever done, was one adventure that didn't peter out for him. Yes, he would like that."

"There are so many things I wish I could say to him."

"I think he knows them."

"Thank you for telling me. I must go now. My train leaves shortly."

Win went to the window. "Come here, Halle," he said. "See, the bough is lighter on the hillside. It's stopped raining. The winter is done. It will soon be another year."

Halle stood beside him, looking over the fields she loved.

"Yes," she said, "the spring will soon be here."

"You will come home then?" He had meant only to ask her to come back.

"Yes," she said. "I'll come home then, Win."

There was an early rainbow in the sky when they went outdoors. The air was filled with the promise of spring, and Halle drew its sweetness into the depth of her being where it was to stay forever.

Stocks Register Moderate Gains

In Considerably Expanded Deals

Associated Press Average Rises .3 of a Point to 41.1

By BERNARD S. O'HARA

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (AP)—Making bullish capital out of the report of President Roosevelt's fact finding board on rail wage increase demands, the stock market today registered a moderate advance on expanded dealings.

Broad improvement in share prices was general at the start but gains reached their peak after the rails took over market leadership in the last hour, just before the board's findings were published.

While many of the pivotal issues finished fractions to a point or more ahead, closing prices were well down from the tops in many instances and some early gains were converted into losses, reflecting active profit selling in the final few minutes of trading.

60-Stock Average Up

The Associated Press 60-stock average rose .3 of a point to 41.1. Transactions amounting to $19,300 shares were the largest since Sept. 25 and compared with $97,280 Monday.

Stocks carrying plus marks at the close included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Johns-Manville, Westinghouse, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and American Tobacco. Erie Pfd "A" recorded a 1941 high. American Can dipped to a new year's low.

A number of safety engineers have been loaned of the committee by larger industrial plants and, with the assistance of field agents, are helping smaller plants in installing better safety methods.

"While the general reception so far to the visits has been favorable," the governor said, "there is some skepticism in the ranks of the small manufacturers and today's meeting discussed this phase of the work and ways to combat it."

Those who attended the meeting included Verne A. Zimmer, Washington director of labor standards, United States Department of Labor and statistics and Joseph A. Heller, the State Industrial Accident Commission's safety engineer.

In accepting the honorary chairmanship, O'Connor pledged the state's support in the movement.

Production of artificial butter in Japan has increased remarkably in recent years, the department of Commerce says.

Railroad Bonds Strong

Railroad bonds whirled upwards at a lively pace in the closing minutes after publication of a presidentially appointed committee's report recommending wage increases to rail workers and leaving the door open for a boost in freight and passenger tariffs to pay for the impost.

Total volume of $13,893,375, par value, was the biggest since last May 6 and compared with $6,452,100 on Monday. The Associated Press average of twenty rails ended up .7 of a point, the best gain in any day since the latter part of April.

Students Should Study Assigned Books Carefully

Dr. Myers Declares There Is Too Much Hazardous Learning

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.
One of the plagues which torture modern youth in high school and college is the long, long list of books he is supposed to read on each of several subjects.

If any college student were to read carefully, reflectively, thoughtfully, all the books assigned for him to read in his several subjects, he wouldn't have any time for sleep or recreation. An occasional conscientious youth does try literally to read all of them and pays the price.

Braggs of Skipping It

Some students don't read any of these supplementary assignments at all and brag about the fact that they don't, but pass the course anyway. Perhaps they read reviews of the books, listen carefully in the classroom, recite their basic text well, attend cramming sessions, or are just lucky. A certain number of the class will read some of these assigned books by skimming hurriedly over them.

The whole procedure seems to result in a deal of intellectual dishonesty of getting impressions without much mastery, of haphazard learning. To skim over a few books may be valuable, but the kind of skimming which the average student is induced to do is morally and intelligently harmful.

Of course, books in English courses, such as fiction, might be read with considerable speed. Even very rapid reading of a novel, if more than plot and sequence are desired, hardly can net much value.

Read Reflectively

Of books in most other subjects, solid books, as in history, sociology, general science, economics, philosophy, psychology, rapid reading is hardly possible. In such books many facts and ideas may be crowded into a single sentence or paragraph. Often, some of the supplementary books assigned to be read by the student are themselves text books.

To read the average text book, one must read reflectively. Often the student must pause to find a familiar illustration from experience to clarify the meaning of a meaty statement. He often has to translate a sentence of the text into understandable language.

It may be safe to say that the average student does not read his basal text book in any subject carefully. A good teacher helps him to do so. Why add to his shallow habits of learning by forcing him to spread his efforts to still wider fields?

I'm not arguing against hard work by students nor against their courses being enriched. But the usual broadsides of reading lists shot at students in high school and college hardly attain these ends. My guess is that the average reading list might well be cut down 75 or 80 per cent.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. What do teen age children most desire in their parents?

A. That these parents shall treat them as of the age at which they are.

Democrats Score Sweeping Victory in Hyndman Election

Earlier Squirrel Season in County Favored by Minke

Game Warden Also Wants Uniform Game Laws in Western Maryland

FROSTBURG, Nov. 5.—Regional Game Warden Joseph Minke, Cumberland, a guest speaker at a meeting of the Allegany-Garrett county sportsmen's association, held last evening in the Gunter hotel, expressed himself as being in favor of an earlier squirrel season than the present one, which opens November 1. He suggested September 15 or October 1 and his views seemed to meet with everyone present. He also favored uniform game laws for the three western counties, Allegany, Garrett and Washington.

Mr. Minke answered several questions with reference to existing game laws and urged an educational campaign with a view of having hunters help to prevent fires in the woods and to obey the laws whether they approved of them or not.

Other speakers included Harry Edwards, Grantsville, chairman of the advisory council for Garrett county; Quincy Murphy, Friendsville, and Jesse Merrill, Savage River section, members of the council; Theodore Theorie and Francis Ruge, deputy game wardens; Henry Durt, president of the Grantsville Sportsmen's Association; Jonathan Sireman, member of the Maryland General Assembly, and Daniel Hensinger, Grantsville.

The association accepted a report from Paul Carpenter and J. F. Martin, committee on bi-laws, and decided to adopt the bi-laws at a meeting to be held December 2 for the purpose of the annual election of officers. An honorary membership in the association was awarded to Harry Edwards, Grantsville, who has always taken a keen interest in the affairs of the local association.

The meeting, attended by about fifty sportsmen, was presided over by Frederick Crowe, president. R. Gillary Lancaster served as secretary.

Donahue Rites Held

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Emma McGettigan Donahue, former Allegany county school teacher and widow of John H. Donahue, who died Monday at her home, 166 Bowery street, was held Wednesday morning at St. Michael's Catholic church, with the Rev. Dominic A. Bonomo, assistant pastor, officiating.

Pallbearers were Michael J. Byrne, Augustus Sweitzer, Samuel Walker, Thomas Lewis, Joseph Condon and James Brady. Interment was in St. Michael's cemetery.

To Collect Paper

Plans for a paper collection campaign by Frostburg Club Pack, No. 2, Boy Scouts, was made last evening at a meeting in the auditorium of State Teachers college, called by Walter Mackay, cubmaster, and attended by representatives of the four dens comprising the local pack. The boys who range in age from nine to twelve years will begin immediately to canvass the entire community, collecting glossy paper magazines, such as Colliers, Saturday Evening Post, Red Book, Cosmopolitan and Life, which are made of the only kind of paper that can be disposed of at this time.

Cubmaster Mackay announced that the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company will take all of this type of material.

The action of the Cubs to engage in a paper collection campaign followed a request made last week by Scout Executive Raymond Lator, that both the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts respond to the wishes of the government, made through the O.P.M., that the collection of waste paper be started to help in the national defense campaign.

A number of Frostburgers interested in the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts have consented to take all telephone calls from persons having glossy paper which they will contribute to the cause. They are Clarence Rohmann, Dixon Martin, John Davis, John L. Casey, Franklin Martens, Howard Ward, Lloyd Stevens, Walter Mackay, Arthur Bond and Charles McFarland.

Training Course Classes Opened By Girl Scouts

Members Make First Aid Kits To Fit into Penny Match Box

Miss Florence Ann Schlott, local director of the Girl Scouts, held the first meeting in the training course "Being Physically Fit" yesterday afternoon in the Girl Scout little house, Greene street.

The theme of the meeting was "My Country Expects Me to be Physically Fit Because Strong Bodies and Healthy Minds Are Basic to Taking Care of One's Self and Taking One's Place in the World." Miss Schlott explained this would be carried out in three ways: First—by knowing one's own physical condition by giving Girl Scouts in the city a thorough health examination before December 1. The blanks to be secured at the little house.

Second—by forming good personal health habits, of diet, exercise, sleep, clothing, cleanliness, and attitudes and suggested each scout and leader keep health diary.

Third—by looking out for oneself in case of slight injuries and emergencies such as cuts, burns and bruises, because immediate care avoids future trouble and one should learn not to call upon other people for these simple aids.

The class also learned how to apply slings to their own arms; bandages to their own finger; and to bandage an ankle in case of a sprain. Each made an individual first aid kit including an antiseptic, a capsule of sterilized cotton, a capsule of tannic acid or unguentine, a cotton swab to apply the antiseptic, a kneedle, a match to sterilize the kneedle, a piece of yellow soap in case of exposure to poison ivy and a bandage, all fitted into a penny match box. They also fitted a large first aid kit to keep at the little house.

Members taking the course are Mrs. Harry Bursley, Miss Mary Shriver, of Troop 2; Mrs. Ruth Andrews, Troop 5; Mrs. Marie Chalimor, Troop 9; Mrs. James Kelly, Troop 10; Miss Angela Matthai, Troop 13; Mrs. Harry McNally, Troop 14; Miss Elizabeth Doub, Troop 21; Miss Marcella Murray, Troop 23; Mrs. Milton Beneman, Troop 33; and Miss Elizabeth Johnson, who is in charge of the Service Bureau.

When he returned to America, Gurney began a career that would be hard to duplicate for variety. First he appeared as leading baritone of the DeFeo French-Italian Opera company and with the American Opera company. His debut in Chicago with the latter company in performance of "Faust" was sensational. One of the most brilliant and distinguished audiences ever assembled gave the young American a five minute ovation after his singing of the "Calf of Gold" aria.

Later, he was engaged as leading baritone of the Roxy theater, and toured the country as star of "Roxy's Gang." For one season he sang the lead in "Ziegfeld Follies," proving the old Schumann-Heink adage that "nothing can hurt a career so long as you sing well." Other opera appearances in Cincinnati and St. Louis and in the summer operas at New York's Lewisohn Stadium followed.

Latest Scenes of the $5,000,000 Savage River Dam Project

SPILLWAY CHANNEL—A group of men is shown returning to work down the spillway channel at the huge Savage River dam project after lunch hour. Forms have been laid for pouring concrete. In spite of the fact that the dam is of earthen design, C. B. Cornell, assistant superintendent in charge of engineering, estimates that approximately 180 railroad cars of cement will be used in its construction. When the spillway section is completed it will be graced by a high retaining wall which will be constructed on the left and will run parallel with the rocky cliff down the slope. The concrete floor of the channel has a thickness of three feet and is reinforced with steel.

TOP OF THE DAM—This photograph was taken from the Baltimore and Ohio main line right-of-way and shows the top of the 175-foot dam. Impervious material or selected clay is dumped, watered and packed down by machinery to form the core of the dam. To date 330,000 cubic yards of clay have been used and it will require a total of 745,000 yards to complete the job. Fifty-five per cent of this phase of the dam building has been completed, WPA officials report. In the left background on the wooded slope a cross-mark indicates the point where the water will reach a height of 155 feet to flow over the spillway which is shown on the right. Visitors by the hundreds visit the dam site each week with Sunday the main day for sightseers.

Huge Savage

The dam, 438,000 cubic yards have been put in place.

The total volume of this material, scooped up from the valley floor, will represent 112,000 truck-loads.

Dam Has Rock Facing

Huge rocks form the facing of the dam, on both of its upstream and downstream sides, and these are being put into place by WPA hand labor. The unusual effect is that of a cobble-stone street.

This stone "blanket" is surprisingly even and gives the dam an appearance like few projects of its kind.

The stone used for this work, obtained on the site like the bulk of the other material, totals the staggering volume of 350,000 cubic yards. Roughly speaking, that is enough rock to form a ten-inch layer on 100 miles of roadway twenty feet wide. Of this amount, 196,000 cubic yards have gone into the facing to date.

On the upstream side, the depth of this rock facing varies from fifteen feet at the base to four feet at the crest.

Guard Against Seepage

To guard against seepage beneath the dam, there was dug at the center line what engineers call a "core trench." This trench, thirty-two feet wide, goes down to solid bedrock, and into this rock is squirted grout, or liquid mortar, under terrific pressure to depths varying from twenty to ninety feet, depending on the type of rock. This is done to seal any crevices that may exist in the rock formation.

A section of the dam is already nearing its crest of 175 feet, and the rest is slowly but surely creeping upward across the valley floor to the opposite mountainside. There is still, however, a wide cut to be filled, but Joseph H. Zimmerman, resident WPA engineer for the project, expressed confidence that the work will be finished on schedule by December, 1942.

Another aspect of the project rapidly taking shape is the 320-foot long spillway, on the east side of the dam. An unusual feature of the spillway is the fact that it is being built at right angles to the dam instead of paralleling it. That is, the water flows in a southerly direction, and the spillway will send the water cascading eastwardly into a channel that will then carry it in the direction of the normal flow.

The rugged mountainside, into which a huge gash was cut, will be faced with a two-inch lining of

MIDDLE FORK BRIDGE

One of the many creditable pieces of work turned out by WPA workers at the Savage River dam is the multiple stone arch Middle Fork Creek bridge, two and one half miles from the dam. Two fifteen foot arch spans are constructed of steel and the facing is of stone. WPA officials developed many stone masons out of laborers, many of whom left the project for jobs elsewhere. WPA men also built a rock bridge over Crabtree creek and a concrete slab skew bridge over Dry Run. The bridge is of double-arch construction, with the fifteen-foot arches of steel faced with rock. The Crabtree creek span is similar, but is of rock throughout, while the Dry Run bridge is of concrete slab skew construction to conform with the curvature of the road. Water at flood stage will come up to the visible top of the foundation of the Middle Fork bridge.

cement to a height of some sixty-five feet, twenty feet lower than the dam crest. The crest of the channel will be of such height as to take care of a flood five times larger than any on record.

Despite the fact that basically the dam will be of earthen construction, C. B. Cornell, assistant superintendent in charge of engineering, pointed out that 180 railroad carloads of cement will be used in the spillway and spillway channel, with some utilized in grouting and lining the walls of the diversion tunnel.

The spillway is now about twenty-five per cent complete, engineers said. From the crest of the spillway to the base of the spillway channel is a drop of forty-five feet. The channel, flush against the mountainside, then will slope downward to a point beyond the toe of the dam.

This tunnel, of horseshoe shape and measuring ten by ten feet, was completed some time ago in the near-record time of five months. Controlled by two thirty-inch needle valves, the maximum flow through the tunnel would be 390,000,000 gallons a day. Three billion gallons might flow through the tunnel in STONE FACE OF SAVAGE DAM—Joseph H. Zimmerman, WPA resident engineer at the dam, is shown explaining the stone construction of the stone face on the downstream side of the Savage river project. To date 200,000 cubic yards of rock have been used to blanket the upstream and downstream sides and this phase of the work is being done exclusively by WPA hand labor. When the project is completed it is estimated that 350,000 cubic yards of rock will have been used. This figure is equivalent to 100 miles of road twenty feet wide. Beneath the rock there is packed 438,000 cubic yards of pervious material, namely, sand and gravel. A total of 900,000 cubic yards of pervious material will be used for the entire project, according to officials at the dam. United States engineers designed the dam to cope with flood waters five times greater than the biggest flood ever recorded in this section.

Hattie Caraway

vision of the neutrality act and the arming of American merchant ships today with an assertion that it was "a strange theory that our boys can be shot at without any means of defense."

She spoke at the close of day which saw Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) a leader of the opposition to administration foreign policies, denounce President Roosevelt for not invoking the Neutrality Act in connection with the Russo-German war. The president has administered the act, he said, in a way that permitted him to "play power politics" all over the world and virtually intervene in foreign wars.

Senate Vote Soon

The day's speaking brought the Senate's consideration of the legislation—repealing the present bans on arming American ships and sending them into belligerent waters—close to the voting phase. One more day of oratory, leaders hoped, would conclude the set speech phase of the debate.

Mrs. Caraway based her support for the legislation upon an argument that the passage of the law in the first place invoked an "abject surrender of America's right to the freedom of the seas, that the law was a super-appeasement job," and that it had actually invited attack upon American shipping.

"American ships have been attacked and will continue to be attacked regardless of the ocean or zone upon which they travel," she said. "The claim that American men shall be sent to sea and placed at the mercy and the whim of a soulless opponent and given no means with which to protect themselves is incomprehensible."

"The blood of every American seaman so assassinated will cry out with vengeance upon those who seek to make this possible."

"I feel deeply in this matter. I have two sons wearing the uniform of their country. I am sure this is true of other members of the Senate. I have voted for the other preparedness measures with full knowledge of the responsibility which I assumed."

"I cast these votes believing it to be the best interests of not only my sons, but those of the other fathers and mothers of America. Believing it to be right I can see no other way except to cast my vote for the pending measure. That I intend to do."

During the day, Senator Smith (D-SC), dean of the Senate, announced he would oppose the legislation. "If we are going to declare war, let's declare war," he told reporters. "Let's not be sliding and sneaking in through the back door."

During the day, a White House conference, attended by Mr. Roosevelt's lieutenants in the Senate, concluded that it would be best to keep the legislation clear of such amendments as proposals for combatting strikes in defense industries.

At a press conference Secretary of the Navy Knox said that arming ships was one way to reduce losses from submarine attacks. Submarines "have no love for ships with guns on their decks," he added.

Although the Senate has paid only the most casual attention to the formal debate on the Neutrality law revision question—often not more than a half-dozen senators have been present—two incidents today showed that the issue is cutting deeply.

Lee Flay Wheeler

In the course of Wheeler's speech, Senator Lee (D-Oklahoma) interrupted to shout that the Monanan was "making the same argument that was made by Quisling" and other leaders in small European countries since overrun by the Nazis.

Momentarily taken aback, Wheel-

UNFINISHED PART—Before the $5,274,000 Savage River dam project is completed December 1, 1942, the cut to which Joseph H. Zimmerman, WPA resident engineer, is shown pointing must be filled in to a height of 175 feet. Zimmerman said that the dam will impound approximately six and a half billion gallons of water supplied by the Savage river and Crabtree creek, the main streams, and about five small tributaries. At the level of the overflow, water will cover approximately 360 acres. Water must attain a height of 155 feet to pass over the spillway. Seven homes were razed in the valley to make way for the huge project, WPA officials announce.

WPA MEN AT WORK

This is one of the many busy WPA crews putting huge rocks into place to form the upstream blanket for the Savage river dam. When the project was inaugurated in October, 1939, approximately 1,000 WPA workers were pressed into service, many of whom came from the shutdown coal mines in the George's Creek section of Allegany county, and the total reached 1,200 at one time. Today there are 716 men at work on the huge project and only one shift is employed as compared to two and three in the past. When freezing weather sets in the men will be transferred to road work in the vicinity of the dam for the winter months. The crew of men pictured above term themselves the "George's Creek Beauties." United States Army Engineers, who designed the dam, visited the site last week and expressed satisfaction with the progress being made.

er paused then pointed a forefingerately. He was convinced, he said at the Oklahoma, he shouted his that a large majority of Californians favored arming merchant ships and permitting them to enter belligerent waters.

"There's not a word of truth in that. You know I've been called Quisling by a lot of small-minded people in this country but if the senator from Oklahoma has ever dealt with cold, hard facts on this floor, I've missed it."

Earlier there was a spirited exchange between the two senators from California. Downey (D), long considered a member of the Roosevelt opposition on matters of foreign policy and Johnson (R), whose opposition to any involvement in war.

"Take your people into war if you want to," he added, with a gesture toward Downey, "I am in touch with the state of California. I receive 300 letters a day and the great majority of the mothers who write to me pray that I do what little I can to prevent this country from going to war."

"Take it from me," Johnson said in his office. "I am in touch with the West Side fire company, called to the home at 12:37 o'clock, extinguished the blaze with chemicals."

Fire Is Extinguished

An overheated flue ignited a wad rose in the home of George C. Sell, 329 Greene street, yesterday afternoon, and caused considerable damage to the contents of the wardrobe and to the wallpaper and walls of the room.

West Side fire company, called to the home at 12:37 o'clock, extinguished the blaze with chemicals.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Reinhard and Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Reinhard, of this city will attend the twenty-third annual convention of the Association of American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages, which will be held in the Municipal Auditorium in Philadelphia, Nov. 10-14.

Theaters TodayAudiences Thrilled With 'Chute Leap

If you have never leaped from a soaring plane, with an unopened parachute, the only thing between you and destruction you're going to get all the thrill of taking that jump when you see "Parachute Battalion," starting tomorrow at the Liberty. This new RKO Radio picture, starring Robert Preston, Nancy Kelly, Edmund O'Brien and Harry Carey, takes its audiences right up there with the youthful recruits in the big transport, and bares their secret fears and misgivings. You will jump with them as they step through the open door of the plane, feel their relief and exhilaration as the big chute fills with air, glides down with them to a landing.

Around the basic idea, the fashioning of raw recruits into fighting parachutists at Fort Benning, Ga., has been constructed a tensely dramatic story of courage and patriotism and love, seasoned with generous sprinklings of human interest and comedy.

"Parachute Battalion" is described as man-drama, in a setting never before utilized on the screen for the simple reason that the parachute corps is a recent development in U. S. Army training activity.

Laurel and Hardy Are Not Jealous

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy unlike many other teams of comedians are not jealous of each other, and try to present the laughs in a picture effectively without regard to the part played by either in obtaining the laugh. Monty Banks, who directed them in their newest comedy, "Great Guns," the 20th Century-Fox film due tomorrow at the Strand, was not used to such professional courtesies, and was a bit bewildered by the boys at first.

There was one gag in particular that had Banks all mixed up. The script called for Stan to deliver the punch line. As they prepared to go into the scene, Stan said, "You know, Ollie, I think this would go better if you gave it the clincher." He then went up to explain why.

Ollie, however, wasn't sure, and they discussed the matter, each more or less urging the other to take the major part.

Banks listened patiently for a while. He couldn't understand the conversation, and finally exploded with: "If you guys don't like this gag, why in heaven's name don't you say so."

Jeannette MacDonald Teams with Raymond

Teamed together for the first time on the screen, Jeannette MacDonald and Gene Raymond play the sweethearts of the immortal "Smilin' Through," also starring Brian Aherne, which is currently appearing at the Maryland theater.

Photographed in technicolor, the world famous love story comes to the screen with a rich musical score by Herbert Stothart as well as an all-star cast including Ian Hunter, Patrick O'Malley, Frances Robinson and little Jackie Horner.

Written by Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin, "Smilin' Through" tells of an immortal love which not even death can kill. Not even the death of his sweetheart at the hands of a jealous suitor on the eve of their action supplies a swift succession of exciting events.

The cast supporting Farrell and Miss Lang includes John Miljan, J. Arthur Young, Bernadene Hayes and Dave Clark.

'Devil Dogs of the Air' Timely Adventure Film

Audiences at the Garden theater yesterday were pleased by their unchecked applause that Warner Bros. had acted in accordance with popular trends in bringing back to the screen the James Cagney-Pat O'Brien star of a few seasons ago, "Devil Dogs of the Air." The picture is much more important and is much more powerful when seen in the light of present day events than when it was first released.

Cagney has never given a better performance than his portrayal of a fresh youth who joins the Marines because he can't keep out of air ships. He gets into the aviation corps through the kindness of a Marine officer, played by Pat O'Brien, and he rewards Pat by stealing his girl, portrayed by Margaret Lindsay. Frank McHugh has a droll comedy role as an ambulance driver.

A truly fine motion picture is the current tenant at the Garden, and judging from the reception which it was accorded by last night's audience it is first-rate entertainment. "Smiling Victory," written by A. J. Cronin, one of the world's most famed novelists, is a tightly-knit drama with a brand-new theme.

It demonstrates that a high order of intelligent counter-plotting is necessary at all times to defeat the efforts of international terrorists.

LaSalle substitutes: Small, Hughes, Nelson, Ford, Drifill, Simmons, Passarelli, N. Jeant, Cesna, Nakale, Way, Murphy, L. Burke, Lathey, Shaffer, Carter, Dunc, Deacon, Cavanaugh, Umpire—Blough, Head linesman—Bower.

Activity on the city scholastic football front will get under way a day earlier this weekend with LaSalle's clash with the West Virginia School for the Deaf eleven of Romney at the Fort Hill stadium tonight at 8 o'clock opening the program.

Despite injuries to two of their outstanding players—Johnny Small, stellar end, and Donald Palmer, veteran tackle—the Explorers will be heavily favored over the lighter Romney outfit, which in addition lacks experience.

Jack Morrissey, regular left end, will move over to the other wing to replace Small while Jim Fahey will start at the left end position. Anthony Houck will substitute for Palmer. Both Small and Palmer were injured in the Allegany game nearly two weeks ago but Small may play tonight if he's needed. Palmer is definitely out with a leg injury.

Brooks May Play

Bobby Brooks, a regular last year but ineligible for LaSalle's previous games, is expected to see service tonight. West Virginia School for the Deaf officials have given the Blue and Gold permission to use Brooks, who will play either at tackle or guard.

LaSalle will go into the tussle after two weeks of rest, the Explorers' scheduled game at Martinsburg, W. Va., last Saturday having been canceled due to a muddy gridiron.

Friday's spotlight will be centered on the Cumberland Valley Athletic League engagement between the Fort Hill Sentinels and Hagerstown at 8 o'clock at the local bowl, while on Saturday, Allegany's unbeaten West Siders will invade Martinsburg to meet the Bulldogs in another CVAL game.

If both Fort Hill and Allegany get by weekend tests, the local rivals' class on Thanksgiving Day would decide CVAL as well as city honors. Hagerstown has been conceded a slight edge over the Sentinels while Allegany, although it will be without the services of Fullback Don Snyder, should make it eight straight victories at the expense of the Bulldogs.

Ridgeley Plays Romney

Tomorrow's tussle here will mark the close of Hagerstown's CVAL campaign and if Eddie Semler's pugnacious performers win, they will rest their case with a record of three victories and one defeat.

Also on tomorrow's program is the Potomac Valley Conference scrap between Romney, setting the pace in the circuit, and Ridgeley on the Romney field. Ridgeley recently knocked Moorefield out of the conference leadership and if Coach Bill Hahn's crew can give Romney a similar dose, the Yellow Jackets will be back in the title picture. A Romney triumph would just about sew up the pennant for Bob Kyle's unbeaten combination.

Moorefield will invade Petersburg for a conference tilt either on Saturday or on Monday, November 10, while the Potomac State Catawampus will oppose Ithaca in the latter's gridiron in a collegiate skirmish Saturday afternoon.

NIGHT GLOW NEAR PIMLICO RECORD

BALTIMORE, Nov. 5 (AP)—Night Glow, a three-year-old filly owned by Gustave Ring of Washington, came within a fraction of a second of tying Pimlico's track mark for a mile and one-sixteenth when she raced to a surprising victory in the $2,500-added Lady Baltimore handicap today.

Ridden by Wendell Eads, the daughter of Pharamond 2nd—Red Sunset turned the distance in 1:44 1-5 just one-fifth of a second over the track mark and one and one-fifth seconds better than the previous time for the stake. The lightly-regarded filly paid $37.20 for $2.

Brookmeade stable's Pomona closed fast to take second money in a photo-finish with Night Glow, while John A. Bell, Jr.'s Dark Discovery was six lengths back in third place. George D. Widener's favored Rosetown finished sixth in the field of eight.

Detroit Voters Send Ex-Slugger To City Council

Billy Rogell Will Help Gus
Dorais To Govern Community

DETROIT, Nov. 5 (AP)—Irrepressible William G. Rogell, former shortstop of the Detroit Tigers and amateur fireman of such renown that his fans call him "Chief," had no public comment today upon his election to the city council, august governing body of the nation's fourth largest community.

If that seems strange, consider the circumstances:

Billy, not yet enough of an elder statesman to stick around for the votes to be counted, waited just long enough for the polls to open so he could cast his own ballot yesterday. Then he struck out for the hinterland and a bit of pheasant hunting. He hasn't been home since.

Showed Ruth Up

Maybe the 36-year-old ex-slugger whose proudest boast used to be that he "showed Babe Ruth up in his own back yard" by garnering ten hits—including three homers, two triples and a couple of two-baggers—in seventeen appearances at the plate in a five-game series with the Yanks in 1932, is studying up on his political science.

In 1816 a party of Italian tourists became fascinated by the game and took it to Italy, promising to bring it back. So much for promises. The best hopscotch player I ever saw was a lass called Annie Ruth Wimpole, of Shoatsbury junior high. She was fast, dead honest, and stamp with that indefinable something called "class." On retiring from the game, she married an osteopath and moved to Duluth.

Lardner Offers Valuable Advice To the Sportlorn

No Opening in Major League Baseball for Young Men

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—Advice to the sportlorn: The Lardner letterbox answers the mail (Ed. note: please do not send presents of fruit, flowers, cheese, or scrapiron. This department can be bribed only in the usual manner).

Dear Sir—What is the origin of hopscotch? Be brutally frank in your answer, as I am one who can take it, and would rather know the truth now than later. (Signed) Sweet Sixteen.

Answer: Hopscotch was developed in 1754 by crossing a frog with a retired grocer named McIntosh. By 1800 its popularity was such that crowds of three or four hundred used to gather and stand on the corner. The critic Herzog says they were waiting for a streetcar, but his statement should be taken with a grain of salt, as electricity did not come into use among the nicer class of people till several years later. Of course, it might have been a horse-drawn car. Horses were already known at the time, though not very favorably.

No Baseball Opening

Dear Mr. Lardner—I understand there is an opening in big league baseball for young men. Is that a fact? (Signed) Heartsick.

Answer: No. Big league baseball has no special opening for young men. On or about the third Tuesday in April the ball clubs open their gates to one and all, women and children being welcomed with the rest. It is generally pretty crowded, and the smart fan will wait till the next day for a better choice of seats.

DETROIT, Nov. 5 (AP)—Irrepressible William G. Rogell, former shortstop of the Detroit Tigers and amateur fireman of such renown that his fans call him "Chief," had no public comment today upon his election to the city council, august governing body of the nation's fourth largest community.

"But I can learn if I'm elected," he would add quickly. "I didn't know much about baseball when I started playing, either, and I got to all these fellows in there on the council now have to learn about government, and if they did it I guess I can."

He placed fifth in a field of 122 in the non-partisan municipal primary was third among the nine successful candidates in the runoff election yesterday.

Dorais Must Move Over

Rogell attributed his success in the primary to the fact that he never ducked a date in the lettuce league. People appreciated his willingness to speak at banquets when other players were too high-hat, he believes, and he made the appearances an occasion for making friends whose votes counted.

So Bill, who went to the Boston Red Sox in 1925 from the Mississippi Valley circuit, played with the Detroit Tigers from 1935 to 1940, and bowed out of organized baseball this summer as manager of Lancaster Pa.'s last-place club in the Interstate League.

But a retired athlete in the political league won't be anything new to Detroit or Michigan. Charles E. (Gus) Dorais, University of Detroit football coach, will have to move over to make room for Rogell at the Detroit city council table.

No. 1 Team Has Four Possible All-Americans

Longhorn Fans Are Sure Crain Deserves Honor

Berths Also Being Claimed for Kutner, Layden and Daniel

BY RAY NEUMANN

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 5 (P)—Having the No. 1 team of the nation gives considerable leeway for boasting by University of Texas football followers.

Now they're claiming four all-American berths for the Longhorn squad. They say these deserve All-America mention:

Jack Crain — Most phenomenal broken field runner in the Southwest if not in the nation; field general extraordinaire, top-notch quick-kicker and fine pass hurler and receiver.

Malcolm Kutner—Crack right end who snags aerials and runs with speed to burn; deadly tackler and blocker and a terror on rushing passers or kickers.

Crain Amazes Experts

Pete Layden — Half of the Crain-Layden duo; powerhouse linesmasher and ball-lugger; one of the Southwest's best triple-threat fullbacks and no slouch as a broken field artist himself.

Chal Daniel — Dynamic right guard whose all-round finesse and execution are so effective they're unspectacular; big agility and speed; he leads the interference, blocks with lethal efficiency, never gets trapped, charges passers and kickers aggressively.

Stumpy, 170-pound, five-foot-seven-inch Crain, the Southwest Conference's leading point-getter with sixty-six, continues to amaze experts with his uncanny ability to outmaneuver would-be tacklers.

Six feet-two and weighing 190 pounds, Kutner is one of the fastest ends ever to perform for Texas and not only catches passes from all angles but gets loose and runs to touchdowns.

Layden Is Fast Starter

A tremendously fast starter, Layden, five-feet-eleven at 185 pounds, takes advantage of many a momentary opening and shoots at cannonball speed through the line and secondary.

Six feet tall and 200 pounds of dynamite, Daniel leads the interference on offense. After carrying out his original assignment, he bounces up and frequently blocks out another opponent before the play ends.

The fans admit it's difficult to select standouts on a team so smoothly co-ordinated as the versatile Longhorns. So possibly they have overlooked two or three other prospective All-Americans.

Frostburg State Plays Salisbury

FROSTBURG, Nov. 5—Coach George "Gimp" Carrington's Frostburg State soccer team, idle last week due to the cancellation of a game with Blue Ridge, is preparing for a tussle with the Salisbury Teachers on the latter's field Friday afternoon.

The contest will probably decide the state teachers' college championship as Frostburg needs a tie or a victory to clinch the title since Towson, defeated by Frostburg, tied Saturday.

The Eastern Shore eleven boasts a strong defense and playing on its home field may upset the Mountaineers. Contests between the teams during the past three years have been very close with never more than one point deciding the battles.

Last week's idleness afforded cripes on Frostburg's team a needed rest and the squad will be at full strength for the first time since the opening game.

Carrington has not selected the trip party yet but during recent workouts, Jim Brode has been holding down the goal position. Brode, a freshman, is gradually gathering necessary experience.

Jack Jenkins and Ancil Sites have been at fullback posts, Ed Athey has been shifted to center half and has had Bill Lamberson and Tom Blair as mates at the other back spots.

Dick Paganardi and Tom Kilduff may handle the wing assignments while Bill Shiff and Joe Peretti, who have been leading the team in scoring, have been working the inside lines. Hal Conrad, scheduled to report to Uncle Sam in two weeks, will probably finish his season at center forward.

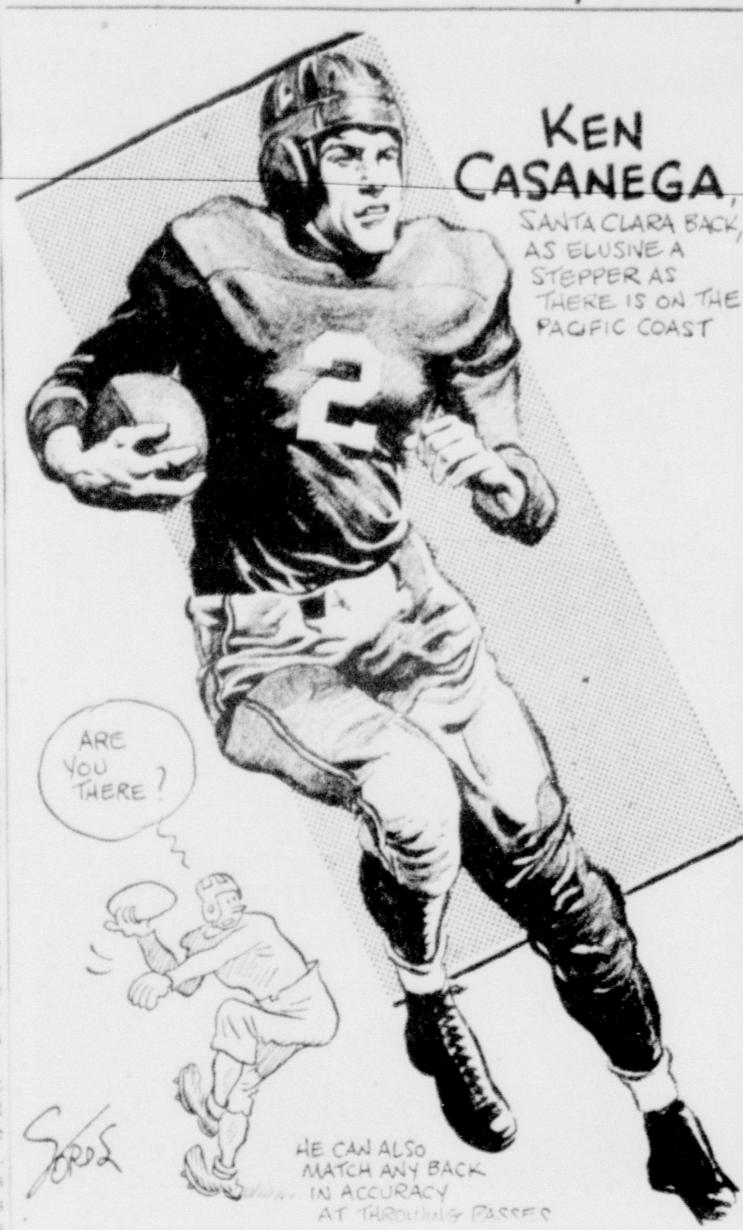

Frostburg will close its campaign Saturday November 15, by meeting Slippery Rock in the local school's homecoming game. Last year, the Mountaineers topped the Pennsylvanians 2-1 in a snow storm.

Coach's Honesty Ends Long Grid Winning Streak

Howard Blair Candidate for 1941's Outstanding Sportsman

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(The Special News Service)—Ever year there is a sharp k-i-yi by some licked football team somewhere along the line, the yelp carrying the charge that the winning team was on the profit side of an official error or had used tactics not even on the same shelf with the code of sportsmanship.

Last year there was the Cornell-Oregon State incident, in which Ohio State accused Carl Snavely of waving dummy roman candles on the bench to tell his quarterback what to do. There also was the Cornell-Dartmouth fifth-down epic, which ended with a sweet taste all around as Cornell, the official error acknowledged, gracefully presented its opponent, the game.

Last Saturday Minnesota defeated Northwestern on a play which brought a painful yowl from Lynn Waldorf, and the Saturday before Florida emitted a plaintive bleat, based on the charge L.S.U. won the game after it ended, and that someone had the face to stop a clock. The clock never should have stopped in those closing seconds, the Gators claim.

Coach Shows Sportsmanship

Just to quell any notion that college football is conducted by a bunch of querulous old codgers looking for trouble, attention might be called to the game between the Tahlequah, Okla., eleven, and the Springfield, Mo., Teachers. When better sportsmanship is shown on the part of a coach we'd like to be around.

Springfield had won eighteen straight games, and after a slow start seemed to be on the way to the nineteenth. Tahlequah had scored four points in the first half, and Springfield had tied it up with about five minutes remaining in the fourth period.

Springfield tried an onside kick-off, and one of its players recovered the ball to give it first down in Tahlequah territory.

The Tahlequah coach and players protested vigorously, claiming the kick had not traveled the necessary ten yards. The officials, however, ruled otherwise and gave Springfield the ball.

The incident took place directly in front of the Springfield bench, and Coach Howard Blair took it all in. He could have kept his mouth shut and given his team a chance to try for another touchdown.

Instead he told the officials that the player who had recovered the ball had fudged it across the fifty-yard line when he fell, and that the play was illegal. Springfield kicked off again and Tahlequah went down for the winning touchdown.

Blair was an assistant coach at Ohio State before going to Springfield in 1938. His Springfield teams, through the Tahlequah game, had won twenty-seven, lost four and tied three.

A coach is supposed to build character, and if there is any better way to build it than by the example set by Blair we haven't heard of it. Had he remained silent nobody would have been the wiser, except his own players. But it was his own players who were the most important, and if they detected a trace of dishonesty in their coach, all the locker-room chats and elegant pleas for fair play would thereafter be greeted with cynical smiles. A fine guy to talk about fair play.

So we add the name of Howard Blair to the list of candidates for the honor of outstanding sportsman of the year.

High Is Fourth Among Football League Passers

Individual Statistics Undergo Only Few Changes This Week

CLEVELAND, Nov. 5.—A pair of Sammy Baugh of Washington and Marshall Goldberg of the Chicago Cardinals, and Goldberg's comparatively recent team-mate Bill Dewell, succeeded in about the only major individual statistics in the National Football League this week.

The Sweetwater rancher moved up in Hollywood, from ninth to fourth place among the league's leading passers by compiling twelve of nineteen attempts while the Redskins were whipping Pittsburgh. Cecil Isbell of Green Bay continues to lead passers, however, with the remarkable average of 177 completions. The former Purdue star has thrown at least one touchdown pass in each of the Redskins' eight games. Only seven interceptions in 149 passing attempts make Isbell's record even more remarkable.

Goldberg, like Isbell, enjoying his greatest season in major league football advanced from tenth place to fourth among ground gainers by conquering forty-seven yards to the Cardinals' victory over the Giants in twelve attempts. His total of 231 yards leaves him only eight behind Isbell.

The Raiders of Brooklyn, the team with the best record in the East, have gained 1,000 yards with Frank Filchock of Washington and Clarke Hinkle of Green Bay, the All-Time record holder, still in close pursuit. Don Hutson of Green Bay, continues to set the pace for pass leaders with forty receptions, four touchdowns and a catch in last week's Bear H. and Dewell, who suffered an ankle fracture early last season, made steady improvement by catching 14 passes against New York to move from sixth to second among receivers, displacing Perry Schwartz, the Dodger veteran. The statistics:

Elk Lodges Will Give Examination For Cadet Corps

Will Sponsor Refresher Course for High School Graduates

Cumberland Lodge No. 63 and Frostburg Lodge No. 479, of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, in co-operation with the Allegany County Board of Education will sponsor a "refresher" course to enable high school graduates to pass the necessary examination for the Aviation Cadet Corps. Charles M. Stump, national defense chairman of the local Elks lodge announced last night.

Previous requirements for entrance to the cadets were two years of college credits. Recently the army relaxed the requirements to allow high school graduates who can pass an examination in arithmetic, algebra, trigonometry, geometry, English and choice of two subjects from an optional list of physics, inorganic chemistry, United States history, general history and modern language to be admitted to the cadets.

Classes Start Soon

To allow young men in Allegany county the opportunity to earn a commission, the two Elks' lodges will establish a refresher course with classes beginning the week of Nov. 17. Classes will be held three evenings a week in one of the local schools. The Board of Education is contributing school room facilities and the two lodges will supply the compensation for the teachers and have charge of organizing the program.

After a young man has completed the refresher course and passed the educational examination he is eligible to enter the aviation cadets. As a cadet he will receive $75 per month and a ration allowance of $1 per day. After graduating he will be commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Air Corps Reserve and will receive a minimum pay of $20 per month.

Applicants for the "refresher" course will fill in Aviation Cadet Corps application in triplicate, have three letters of recommendation and a birth certificate or documentary evidence of date of birth. He will then take the army preliminary physical examination. Applicants must be between twenty and twenty-six years of age and single.

Joseph P. Montana, chairman of the Elks National Defense Commission of Frostburg Lodge No. 479 and Charles M. Stump, chairman of Cumberland Lodge's committee, in commenting on the program announced that representatives of their committees and army recruiting officers will be at the respective lodges on Thursday and Friday evenings from 7:30 to 9 o'clock to talk to prospective applicants for the course and also to help any young men who have two years of college credits make applications.

Young men residing in territories covered by Local Draft Boards 1, 2 and 3 should contact the Cumberland Lodge and those living in the territory of Draft Board No. 4 should contact Frostburg Lodge.

100,000 Pilots Needed

Exalted Rulers Alfred E. Howe of Cumberland and Thomas G. Davis of Frostburg in a joint statement last night said:

"In establishing the refresher course the Elks hope to give some young men of our communities a chance to earn a commission in the air corps and to help the air corps obtain the 100,000 pilots it needs this year. We thank the Board of Education for its co-operation."

Staff Sgt. Clarence Biehn, of the recruiting office here, when informed of the Elks' action last night said:

"It is indeed gratifying that the Elks are sponsoring such a vital defense project. The facilities of my office are completely at their disposal."

Absolute Divorce Decree Handed Down in Court

Mrs. Annabel S. Leonard has been granted an absolute divorce in circuit court from William G. Leonard.

The decree, signed by Associate Judge William A. Huston, awarded Mrs. Leonard custody of their children and ordered the husband to contribute to their support. The couple was wed March 12, 1927, and separated September 27, 1941, according to testimony in the case, in which the plaintiff was represented by Julius E. Schindler, attorney.

Suit for an absolute divorce was docketed yesterday by Mrs. Mary M. Nowicki, of Cumberland, against Bernard Nowicki, said to be a non-resident of Maryland.

The bill of complaint, filed by William R. Carsaden, attorney, says the couple was wed January 4, 1927, in Milwaukee, and alleges that Nowicki's failure to support his wife forced her to return to the home of her mother here. His actions constituted "constructive desertion" according to the suit, which asks restoration of the plaintiff's maiden name.

Another suit placed on the equity dockets lists Ernest T. Lawrence as plaintiff and Mabel A. Lawrence as defendant, but details of the action, docketed by Estel C. Kelley, attorney, were not available.

Miller Child Hurt

Suffering a dislocated left elbow when he fell while playing in his home, Gaylord Miller, five-year-old son of Mrs. Grace Miller Long, was treated last evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Allegany hospital dispensary.

Dr. Koon Denied Damages by Jury

Verdict for Defendant Returned in $2,500 Automobile Crash Suit

Dr. Thomas W. Koon, former Cumberland mayor, yesterday was denied damages by a circuit court jury for injuries suffered in an automobile accident last spring.

The jury deliberated nearly an hour before returning a verdict for the defendant, Earl Warner, proprietor of a gasoline service-station near the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

Dr. Koon had asked $2,500 for personal injuries and damages to his automobile as the result of a crash on the morning of March 1, 1941, on the Lintonville curve on the eastern outskirts of the city.

Warner, represented by W. Earl Cobey, attorney, denied the plaintiff's charges of negligence and presented testimony to substantiate his counter-charge that Mrs. Elizabeth Dixon, driver of the Koon car, was at fault.

The Koon car was entering the Baltimore pike from Central avenue when it was struck by the Warner car, heading east on the pike.

On the petition of defense counsel, the Service Fire Insurance Company, Inc., which partially paid for the damages to the Koon automobile, was made co-plaintiff at the opening of the trial.

Charles Z. Heskett was counsel for Dr. Koon, while Elmer B. Gower, attorney, represented the insurance company.

The case occupied the entire court day.

R. C. Wilson Is Re-elected Head Of Farm Bureau

County Group Favors Inflation-Checking Price Control Bill

Members of the Allegany County Farm Bureau held their annual meeting last night at St. Mark's Lutheran church here, feasted on Turkey and all sorts of trimmings, elected officers for the coming year and gave vociferous support of their national chief in standing for an inflation-checking price control bill that will include a ceiling on farm prices at parity achievement along with ceilings on all other prices, including wages.

The attitude on price control legislation was made evident in the conferring of the Master Mason's degree on a local Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company employee. All stations of the lodge were occupied by B. & O. men.

Women Serve Luncheon

Following the degree work, a luncheon comprising chicken sandwiches, potato salad, ice cream, cake and coffee was served in the temple banquet hall by thirty-five members of McKinley Chapter No. 12, Order of the Eastern Star. Vocal selections were provided by a sextet of the Westport lodge of Masons.

Committee in Charge of Reception

The committee in charge of the reception comprised Robert Critchfield, William H. Burke, Robert Shourt and John E. Tritt.

Baltimore and Ohio employees from Masonic lodges in Pittsburgh, Meyersdale and Connellsburg, Pa.; Grafton, Tunnelton, Terra Alta, Rosedale, Martinsburg and Berkley Springs, W. Va.; Baltimore, Washington, D. C. and Wilmington, Del., attended the affair.

Ladies' Night Planned

Thirty per cent of the membership of East Gate Lodge, of which D. Marshall Lohr is worshipful master, comprises Baltimore and Ohio railroad employees.

East Gate lodge is anticipating the staging of a "Ladies' Night" program in the near future.

Oppose Sales Tax

In the course of his talk, Wilbert Smith explained why the state farm bureau stands opposed to any sales taxes which opposition, he said, will be continued. Such taxation is considered by the farm leaders as unfair, he said, because it lays a burden upon necessary consumption rather than ability to pay and therefore unduly affects what the farmer has to sell and has to buy. For another reason, he pointed out, it is a form of taxation that tends to produce an overabundance of revenues and this, in turn, invites extravagance and waste in government. It was also declared to be unfair because it causes a multiplied tax upon small purchases.

In view of the fact that this country is in a serious predicament because of the war situation, P. C. Turner of Baltimore county, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau, declared that farmers as well as all other citizens must unite in efforts to aid Britain and its allies in defeating the "mad man now loose in Europe." "We are now in a shooting war," Turner said, "and we must not let them fall." Unfortunately, some selfish labor leaders are "working for Hitler." Turner said, and the peril from abroad reached into our midst as well as in South American nations. But the

Smith Returns Home From West Coast

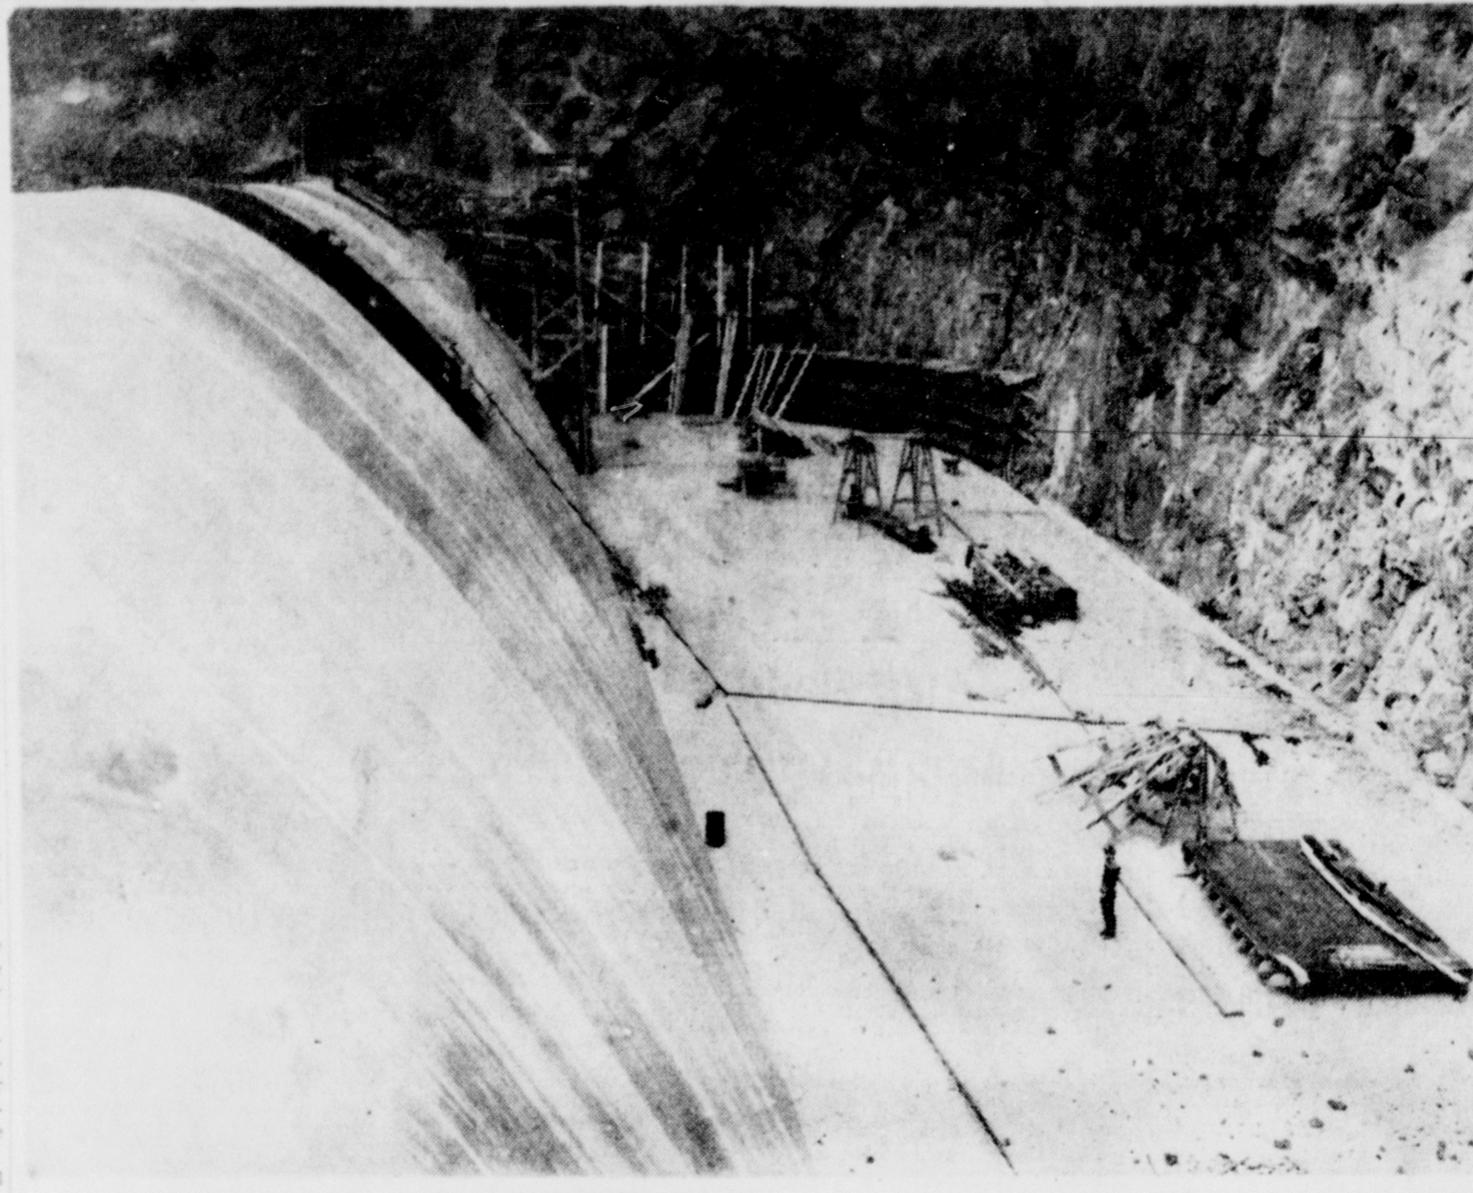

Harold W. Smith, secretary of the chamber of commerce, returned this week from the West Coast and Canada.

Smith made the trip to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries at Los Angeles, and also visited other West Coast cities, going as far north as Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

He was accompanied on the trip by Mrs. Smith, who remained to visit her sister, Mrs. Melvin Carnine, in Seattle, Wash. and other relatives in the West.

SAVAGE DAM SPILLWAY—Here's a close-up of the 320-foot spillway at the Savage River dam. The spillway's height is 1,468 feet above sea level and 155 feet above the valley floor. A worker is shown standing below in the channel which has a concrete floor three feet thick. A concrete side wall sixty-eight feet high and two feet thick will be erected as a facing for the rocky cliff shown at the right. The distance from the top of the spillway to the channel below is forty-five feet. Officials at the dam report that the spillway part of the project is twenty-five per cent complete. (Other photographs of the Savage River dam appear on Page 15).

Huge Savage River Dam 55 Per Cent Completed

December, 1942, Is Set as Completion Date; Total Cost Estimated at $5,274,000

But it's still a lot of water—enough to cover 20,000 acres to the depth of one foot, or to inundate the seventy square miles that are the District of Columbia to the depth of nearly six inches.

Another illustration of the volume of water to be impounded is that it represents an amount almost ten times the average weekly water consumption of the city of Cumberland in recent months.

The dam that will do this job is, as has been noted, a small mountain of earth and stone. When completed it will rise above the original stream bed to a height of 175 feet and, including its spillway, will stretch across the valley floor, from one mountain side to another, for 1,500 feet, or better than one-fifth of a mile. The dam itself will be 1,050 feet across; the spillway and its channel will account for the additional 100 feet.

The scene is the huge Savage river dam project in Garrett county, near Bloomington, where engineers revealed yesterday that work is now nearly fifty-five per cent complete. The big dam, on which work was started in October, 1939, is scheduled to be completed by December, 1942, at an estimated cost of $5,274,000, of which $1,000,000 was contributed by Allegany county.

Dam Takes Shape

Remarkable progress has been made on the job by WPA labor, and what was once a peaceful farming area has been transformed into a veritable dynamo of activity, with the huge dam rapidly taking shape as the focal point of hundreds of hustling workers.

This project, the scope of which is literally breath-taking, is no "boondoggling" job. It is a man-sized job and is being carried out in a man-sized way. With the goal in sight, every worker, from the foreman down to water boy, seems to be taking pride in his work, pride that he is engaged in this monumental task of harnessing waters that will become the life-blood of industry in this area.

Needless to say, it takes a lot of material to build a dam of this size and that's what the huge trucks are carrying as they rumble across the valley floor—thousands of loads of earth and stone.

Present lieutenants governors in Maryland include Harold W. Smith, of the Cumberland club.

Dr. Zinn announced yesterday in Chicago that the Capital district is of selected impervious clay; that is, clay which water will not penetrate.

This material, 745,000 cubic yards of it, is being secured from the hillsides and mountain sides at the project.

The total amount of impervious material to be used is approximately equal to 93,125 truck-loads.

Charles S. Donley, of Pittsburgh, president of Kiwanis International speaking to the governors-elect in Chicago yesterday, urged them to see that "all necessary productive manpower is directed to the national defense. We still have the challenge of producing to the capacity of American enterprise and then we need a greater volume of airplanes, ships, guns and defense machinery," he said.
